Welcome

Dear Participant,

Welcome to this transformational journey. This workbook has been designed to accompany you through the entire One Bank Culture programme. It is not merely a set of notes to be filed away; it is a working tool that will guide you through every session, help you reflect deeply, and track your growth.

Programme Overview

The programme is built on a simple but profound truth: an organisation is only as strong as the holistic health of its people. Communication, collaboration, productivity, and commitment are not independent variables they are effects of a deeper cause: connection. When team members are well connected at relational, emotional, mental, and spiritual levels, communication and collaboration flow naturally. When they are not, no amount of policy or procedure can compensate.

This workbook will walk you through five interconnected sessions. Each session builds upon the previous one, moving from personal balance to interpersonal connection, then to trust, and finally to collective synergy.

The goal is not information. The goal is transformation.

How to Use This Workbook

- Bring it to every session. This is your personal companion for the entire programme.
- Write in it. Use the reflection questions, checklists, and calendars. The value of this workbook is directly proportional to your honest engagement with it.
- Review it weekly. Set aside time each week to review your notes and track your progress against the Developed Transformation Indicators (DTIs).
- Use it with your accountability partner. Share your reflections and hold each other accountable.
- Keep it accessible. This workbook is designed to be a long-term reference for your personal and professional life.

SESSION 1:

Foundations of the One Bank Culture

Promoting One Bank Culture: Strengthening Communication and Collaboration

Session Preview

Many organisations apply much effort in improving communication and collaboration, but the results are often ineffective. This is because communication and collaboration are effects of a hidden cause. This session takes a proactive and resourceful approach to enhancing communication and collaboration.

Communication and collaboration are dependent variables. They depend on the level of connection team members have. Good connection activates good communication and collaboration. An organisation that is well connected, communicating, and collaborating is strong in its values and success in its pursuit of set goals.

1.1 Defining the One Bank Culture

Culture refers to an organisation's identity (vision), beliefs, values, and principle-centred behaviours.

- Purpose is what directs practice.
- Why do we exist as a Bank? — This is our purpose.
- How do we actualise our purpose of existence? — This is our practice.

Promoting One Bank Culture literally means:

- Envisioning our purpose in any taken direction
- Staying consistent in what we value and believe
- Staying competent in what we do

Reflection Question 1.1

In your own words, what does "One Bank Culture" mean to you?

1.2 The Synergy Factor

Synergy refers to a connection of power or skills to enable two or more people to work together effectively and achieve what each one could not attain if they had worked separately.

The Developed One Bank Culture Cycle:

Key Insight:

- Connection = Connectivity at the relational level
- Communication = Sharing of information at the activity level
- Collaboration = Synergy at the productivity level

Connected people easily communicate, and they also easily collaborate.

Reflection Question 1.2

Think of a time when you experienced true synergy with a colleague or team. What made it possible?

1.3 Connection Points

A. Vision — The DNA Factor

Vision is the foundational connection point. It transcends personal differences and demands that information be shared for goals to be attained. You may not be in good terms with others, but vision demands that you share the information that makes goals achievable.

B. Differences — T.E.A.M. Personalities

Team members are different — like a screw, a nut, a pencil, and a door. Each has a unique function. The beauty of a team is not uniformity but complementarity. Differences are not a weakness; they are a design feature.

Reflection Question 1.3

What unique differences do you bring to your team? How can those differences be better harnessed?

1.4 Levels of Communication

Level	Name	Description
1st	Purpose Level	Communication anchored in shared vision and mission
2nd	Practice Level	Communication about tasks, processes, and procedures
3rd	Personal Level	Communication about feelings, relationships, and well-being
4th	Pressure Level	Communication under stress, conflict, or crisis

Effective teams learn to communicate at all four levels.

Reflection Question 1.4

*At which communication level does your team operate most comfortably?
Which level needs improvement?*

Session 1: Key Takeaways

- One Bank Culture is institutional, not personal.
- Connection is the hidden cause; communication and collaboration are the visible effects.
- Synergy is achieved when connected people communicate and collaborate.
- Vision and appreciation of differences are essential connection points.
- Communication operates at four levels: Purpose, Practice, Personal, and Pressure.

SESSION 2:

Managing Stress Through a Conceptualised Balance Between Work and Life

Session Preview

To build an innovative, creative, and strong-willed team in order to proactively win in functionality, even in the middle of an unstable global economy and other inevitable life challenges that team members experience.

2.1 Key Outcomes for Session 2

By the end of this session, participants will be able to:

1. Avoid unnecessary sources of stress.
2. Master the art of balancing the seven critical areas of life that need management.
3. Use a weekly calendar as a tool for managing the seven areas of life that require balancing.

2.2 Developed Transformation Indicators (DTIs)

1. Team members will live a well-balanced, proactive life instead of an imbalanced, reactive life — by avoiding unnecessary sources of stress and maximising activities that bring balanced living.

2. Team members will enjoy both a personal condition and work functional level that are in good mode, as a result of managing the seven areas of life.
3. Team members will not be running anything that contradicts their planning. They will attain a higher level of order both in their personal and professional lives.

2.3 Defining Stress

Stress is any challenge to the balance of your life or the body.

Challenges can range from traumatising experiences such as loss of a loved one, to nearby deadlines. To the brain, anything that challenges life or the body's balance magnetises stress. It doesn't matter whether it is physical, psychological, emotional, real, or imagined. As long as the brain perceives that your state of balance is being challenged, it counts as stress.

Reflection Question 2.1

What are the top three sources of stress in your life right now?

2.4 Types of Stress

EUSTRESS (Positive Stress)	DISTRESS (Negative Stress)
Promotion to a top yet challenging position	Frustration
Childbirth	Anxiety
A 100 million gift at your house	Disease

Key Insight: Not all stress is bad. Eustress motivates and challenges us to grow. Distress debilitates and drains us. The goal is not to eliminate stress but to manage it and channel it productively.

Reflection Question 2.2

Identify one source of eustress in your life and one source of distress. How do they affect you differently?

2.5 Type A vs. Type B Personality

Trait	Type A Personality	Type B Personality
Pace of Work	Fast, deadline-driven	Steady, process-focused
Response to Stress	Reactive; prone to anxiety	Relaxed; handles pressure calmly
Goal Orientation	Achievement-obsessed	Achievement-aware, but not fixated
Social Interactions	Competitive, assertive	Cooperative, diplomatic
Time Sensitivity	Strong urgency and impatience	Low urgency; flexible with time
Multitasking	High multitasking, often under pressure	Prefers single-tasking with depth
Health Risk Profile	Higher risk of stress-related illnesses (e.g., CHD)	Lower risk; better psychological regulation
Management Style	Directive, high control	Participative, inclusive
Cognitive Focus	Tactical, short-term execution	Strategic, long-term thinking

Note: Most people are a blend of both types. The goal is to harness the strengths of both while mitigating the risks.

Reflection Question 2.3

Where do you fall on the Type A–Type B spectrum? What adjustments could improve your health and effectiveness?

2.6 Symptoms of Stress

Psychological	Behavioural	Physical
Anger	Social withdrawal	Chest pain
Fear	Wandering and occupied mind	Sexual dysfunction
Bitterness	Insomnia	Digestive problems

Reflection Question 2.4

Which of these symptoms have you experienced in the last month? What might be the root cause?

2.7 Sources of Stress

A. Uncertainty

This is an inability to know how things are going to turn out. It could be the future of your job, your relationship, or your business. By not knowing exactly how things will turn out, stress emerges.

B. Financial Challenges

Finances bring ease. The absence of finances creates a lot of stress. It must also be said that some of the financial challenges we incur are self-imposed due to lack of financial literacy or intelligence.

C. Imbalanced Living

When the seven areas of life are not properly managed, stress is the inevitable result.

Reflection Question 2.5

Which of these three sources of stress is most dominant in your life? What is one practical step you can take this week to address it?

2.8 The Seven Areas of Life Management

1. Health

For a worker to be effective, he/she needs to be physically fit. In your daily planning, you need to be conscious about your diet, hydration, and an intentional effort to do exercises. Exercises are not only good for your body but also for the health of your mind. A healthy worker easily manages time.

Action Steps:

- Plan balanced meals for the week
- Drink at least 8 glasses of water daily
- Exercise at least 3 times per week
- Get 7–8 hours of sleep

2. Family

Family is a worker's primary support system. Our family conditions affect our work function. It is important to intentionally plan to have some time with our families so that when it is time for us to attend to work, we have their maintained support.

In a technological world, families are mostly being hit by social media disorientations. People come back from work and they are on their phones, or due to poor time management, they are not able to finish their work in the offices and they carry it over into their homes. If your family is negatively affected by your poor time management, your work will eventually be affected as well.

Action Steps:

- Schedule dedicated family time (no phones)
- Complete work at the office where possible
- Plan regular family activities

3. Finances

The life of a worker consists of many needs, and you need finances to have those needs met. You can meet those needs through what you get from your employment or your investments. It is important that beyond your employment as a worker, you must also consider an investment that brings finances whilst you are on your job. This can help you to attain financial freedom beyond financial security.

Remember: missed deadlines and delayed reports are not a result of lack of time — they can be due to financial demands and stress.

Action Steps:

- Create a monthly budget
- Explore investment opportunities
- Build an emergency fund
- Seek financial literacy training

4. Socialising

A worker must have time to socialise. This is where you must learn to go beyond paying school fees for relatives and buying them fertilizer — and treat yourself. When we socialise, we refresh ourselves emotionally.

Socialising includes watching football, going out to eat, taking trips, and many more, so that you protect yourself from burning out or fatigue. Your social life must also include attending family gatherings such as weddings, funerals, and interacting with friends. A poor social life leads to poor time management.

Action Steps:

- Schedule regular social activities
- Attend family gatherings
- Nurture friendships
- Take regular breaks and holidays

5. Personal Development / Growth

Demands of life require that we should continuously grow. There are some people who started work from a certain position and have been promoted to a higher position. This is as a result of personal development. We need to continually grow because life is always presenting different challenges to us — financial, family, etc. All these challenges demand that we grow.

Ways to Attain Personal Growth:

- Association — Interactions that expose you to advanced levels of life and work.
- Studying — Continuous learning through reading, courses, and reflection.

Action Steps:

- Read one book per month
- Attend a course or workshop quarterly
- Seek mentors and accountability partners

- Set personal growth goals

6. Faith or Belief

Naturally, we are religious beings. Religious commitment is a reliable foundation for life stability. It is important for a worker to always spare some time for such commitments.

Action Steps:

- Set aside time for spiritual practices
- Connect with a faith community
- Practice gratitude and reflection

7. Work

This is now your life at RBM. You have positions and duties. These duties are scheduled and they require your timely execution, reporting, evaluating, and advancement. If the other six areas are well balanced, you will find it easier to also manage your time at work.

Action Steps:

- Plan your workday
- Set clear priorities
- Avoid carrying work home
- Review and evaluate your performance regularly

Reflection Question 2.6

Rate your current satisfaction in each of the seven areas (1 = very poor, 10 = excellent):

Area	Rating (1–10)	One Action to Improve
Health
Family
Finances
Socialising
Personal Development
Faith/Belief
Work

2.9 Challenges: Condition vs. Function

A worker's condition must be good both internally and externally. We are most driven by what we do at the total expense of how we are.

Team members must be intentional in making sure that their personal condition is good so that their professional function is also good. Workplaces are registering a lot of burnout issues, depression, and low performance because much attention is being focused towards hands and very little attention is being conveyed to people's hearts and heads.

Reflection Question 2.7

How would you describe your current personal condition (heart and head)? How is it affecting your professional function?

2.10 Challenges: Activity vs. Productivity

Daniel Goleman is amongst the leading gurus of emotional intelligence. Management productivity is now mostly responding to creative and strategic thinking rather than hard work. If a team is to be productive, it will be a result of their strategic and creative planning, not their active running.

It is important, therefore, for team members to make sure that they are managing all the seven areas that are critical in their lives:

- If a person is not in good health, he cannot be productive.
- If a person has choking financial issues, he may have depressing experiences.
- Balance.

Reflection Question 2.8

Are you busy or productive? What is the difference in your current work life?

2.11 Recommendations

A. Condition Above Function

The question, "How are you?" must precede the question, "How is work?"

Intentional Steps:

- Team members must have supportive accountability partners both at personal and professional level.
- Team members battling stress and depression must be supported by being connected to professional counselling and therapists. (Uthunthu offers such services.)

B. Productivity Above Activity

Productivity is measured better through systematic performance management lines that the Bank has in place. It will be good to have periodic appraisals both at quality and quantity level of the duties that are assigned to members within silos.

Deliberate coaching and therapy must be initiated for members that are struggling due to stress at both personal and professional level. (Uthunthu specialises in performance management and personal development, offering short masterclass courses.)

Reflection Question 2.9

Who is your accountability partner? If you don't have one, who could you approach?

Session 2: Weekly Life-Balance Calendar

Day	Health	Family	Finances	Social	Personal Dev.	Faith	Work
Monday
Tuesday
Wednesday
Thursday
Friday
Saturday
Sunday

Use the calendar below to plan your week. Ensure that all seven areas of life are represented.

Weekly Reflection:

- What went well?
- What needs adjustment?
- What will I do differently next week?

SESSION 3:

Fostering Networking and Relationship Building to Enhance Employee Commitment and Belonging

Session Preview

One Bank Culture is strengthened when team members are well connected, communicating, and collaborating. This session seeks to enhance networking and build relationships amongst team members so that commitment levels are elevated and a sense of belonging is activated.

3.1 Key Outcomes for Session 3

- Participants will realise that they have a need to network or connect to other team members. Some collections can only come from some connections.
- Participants will discover the need to activate a sense of belonging within the One Bank culture, because commitment does not come from a level of competence but belonging.
- Every participant will be given tools to use in order to both network and activate a sense of belonging within a One Bank culture.

3.2 Developed Transformation Indicators (DTIs)

1. Team members experiencing personal and economic growth through the One Bank culture networks — beyond salaries. It will be sourced from how resourceful the One Bank cultural networks are in rewarding team members.
2. Team members will be committed to their duties from a source of belonging rather than from their level of competence.
3. Team members will be willing to demonstrate flexibility in adjusting their personal rigid perspectives in order to network and build relationships with different team members.

3.3 Why You Need a Sense of Belonging

In Maslow's hierarchy of needs, belonging is part of the hierarchy. As humans, we are social beings and we naturally have a longing to give and receive love, to belong to a certain group or community, to be valued, etc. This need must be realised even in working teams.

People are highly committed in environments where they feel a higher sense of belonging. That is why you father or mother your home, not your neighbour's.

Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs

- Self-Actualisation
- Esteem
- Belonging
- Safety
- Physiological

Reflection Question 3.1

On a scale of 1–10, how strong is your sense of belonging within your team? What contributes to or detracts from it?

3.4 Why Commitment?

Commitment is defined as offering one's time and service in support of a cause.

The two key words in the definition are:

1. Time

This is the greatest resource in life that is irrecoverable. Team members spend more active time at work than they do at home. We go home to rest and at least spend time with our family members during weekends. Most of our time is spent at work.

Invested time is the number one indicator of commitment. It is essential that we go beyond the time we spend at work and critically examine how quantitative and qualitative it is spent.

- Quantitatively: Time spent should be tied to productivity, not availability. The productivity of team members is highly dependent on their connectivity with other members.
- Qualitatively: The level of performance and excellence of work is highly dependent on the competence of team members. Competence is highly dependent on an enabling environment.

When we create a One Bank Cultural environment where everyone feels part of the culture, productivity is guaranteed.

Reflection Question 3.2

How do you currently invest your time at work? Is it tied to productivity or merely availability?

3.5 Elevating Commitment and Activating a Sense of Belonging

Networking — Connecting

1. Open and social-minded
2. Disciplined in terms of set boundaries
3. Accommodative

Building Relationships — Relating

1. Trust
2. Openness
3. Social and emotional support

4. Economic empowerment initiatives
5. Walking together beyond working together

Reflection Question 3.3

Which of these networking and relationship-building attributes do you need to develop most?

3.6 Challenges

1. Connection vs. Collection

Some of our solutions to our personal financial and social challenges are within the team members that are surrounding us. Have you ever asked someone for a loan or just any help and they turned you down, yet they had the capacity to give you what you wanted?

People do not help you because they have the capacity. They help you because you have a connectivity with them. Never pursue collection ahead of connection.

The challenge of lacking support in terms of our gripping needs mostly emerges from our scarcity of resourceful networks and relationships.

2. Committed or Omitted?

We will always have low performance when people are simply available

instead of usable.

When people's hearts are depressed, heads destructed, and hands disabled, the One Bank Culture suffers in terms of productivity. A team needs committed members and not omitted ones, but the One Bank Culture must be collective and inclusive. Everyone needs to be summoned on board.

Reflection Question 3.4

Are you committed or merely available? What is the difference in your current work life?

3.7 Recommendations

1. Connection vs. Collection

- Establish small groups for purchase of groceries
- Formulate groups for buying plots and motivating each other in construction
- Formulate cooperatives for farming
- Establish accountability partnerships for emotional check-ups and support
- Conduct periodic wellness clinics for different silos

2. Committed or Omitted?

- The HR department must open channels for people who are depressed at heart, destructed in the head, and disabled in their hands so that they are attended to as individuals
- Team members must maximise the formulated accountability partnerships as sources of opening up and accessing emotional support

Reflection Question 3.5

Which of these recommendations can you personally initiate or participate in?

Session 3: Key Takeaways

- Belonging is a fundamental human need, and it is essential for commitment.
- Commitment is measured by invested time — quantitatively (productivity) and qualitatively (competence).
- Connection must precede collection.
- The One Bank Culture must be collective and inclusive.
- Networking and relationship-building are skills that can be developed.

SESSION 4:

Building Trust, Respect and Understanding Amongst Team Members

Session Preview

A One Bank Culture is not possible without capacity development. We have looked at the need to reinforce the values that strengthen the One Bank Culture. This session seeks to promote a three-dimensional capacity development that makes it possible for teams to build trust, respect, and understanding amongst members and enable them to share knowledge and appreciate different functions within the Bank.

4.1 Key Outcomes for Session 4

1. Participants will realise the need to connect, communicate, and collaborate according to function and not just position. Robin Sharma wrote a book called A Leader without a Title. It suggests that our function is more important than our position.

Within the One Bank Culture are security people who secure all that the Bank hands. Cleaners make sure that the environment is conducive and clean enough for both activity and productivity. We are not important by position; rather, we are important by function.

This session will help people to change their mindset and look at their function as more important than their position. They will also be able to respect those below them because each part makes the vision of the Bank work.

2. Participants will discover the two aspects that make sharing of information easier within the organisation:

a. Vision — You may not be in good terms with others, but vision demands that you share the information that makes goals attainable.

b. Connection — You need to be in a good relationship with the strategic, tactical, and operational levels.

- A disconnection from the top level would mean that the organisation has no vision direction and decisions.
- A disconnection from the middle level would mean that the Bank has a direction and decisions that are lacking implementation because tactical teams are disconnected.
- A disrespected operational level would mean that the organisation has no hands to bring results.

For vision's sake, information must be shared. The sharing becomes easier through a well-connected organisation.

4.2 Developed Transformation Indicators (DTIs)

- i. Team members will be interacting freely both at personal and professional level because of an embraced understanding that position matters less but function is what matters more. And function is interconnected from the top to the bottom and from the bottom back to the top.
- ii. Vision will be highly esteemed above any tension. In conflict resolutions, people will not elevate their feelings above the functional demands of the vision.

4.3 The BSD Model

Dimension	Area of Development	Attributes to be Developed
S — Seeing	HEAD	Creativity, changed mindset, positive attitudes, emotional intelligence
B — Being	HEART	Character, values, principles
D — Doing	HANDS	Competence through skills development, good behaviours

Reflection Question 4.1

Which dimension of the BSD Model do you need to develop most right now — Seeing, Being, or Doing? Why?

4.4 Sharing of Information

Information sharing is the lifeblood of a connected organisation. It requires:

- Vision — the unifying factor
- Connection — the enabling factor

Reflection Question 4.2

How freely does information flow in your team? What hinders it?

4.5 Conclusion: The Body Concept

Parts are what formulate the body.

Level	Body Part	Function
Top Level (Strategic)	Heart	Vision, direction, decisions
Middle Level (Tactic)	Head	Implementation, coordination
Lower Level (Operation)	Hands	Execution, results

The connectivity of these holistically developed parts is what delivers results of an organisation's goals.

Reflection Question 4.3

How does the Body Concept change the way you view your role and the roles of others in the Bank?

4.6 Challenges

1. Status vs. State

Status refers to an impression, while state refers to a condition. Work positions have statuses, but if we are not careful, these statuses can negatively hinder us from connecting with those who hold a lower status. Function does not depend on statuses but the condition (state) of team members.

2. Person or Vision?

The One Bank Culture is institutional, not personal. An institution runs on vision beyond personal feelings. While people's feelings must be given deserved attention, it should never be at the expense of vision. Teams will always have challenges with members who feel bigger than the vision.

Reflection Question 4.4

Have you ever allowed status or personal feelings to hinder connection or information sharing? What will you do differently?

4.7 Recommendations

1. Status vs. State

- Create more forums where statuses are broken and the state of the team is promoted
- When formulating social economic groups, encourage those with lower positions to take lead

2. Person or Vision?

- When resolving conflicts, vision must be the measuring tool instead of people's feelings
- Boldly confront team members who feel bigger than the vision and align them with vision

Reflection Question 4.5

What is one practical way you can help break down status barriers in your team?

Session 4: Key Takeaways

- Function is more important than position.
- Vision and connection make information sharing easier.

- The BSD Model (Seeing/Head, Being/Heart, Doing/Hands) provides a holistic framework for capacity development.
- The Body Concept illustrates the interdependence of strategic, tactical, and operational levels.
- Status and personal feelings must never override vision.

SESSION 5:

Breaking Down Organisational Silos and Encouraging Teamwork Thinking, Problem Solving and Decision Making

Session Preview

This session uses an experiential team-building activity (TBG) to help participants understand the importance of breaking down silos, stretching beyond comfort zones, and working collaboratively toward a shared vision.

5.1 Key Outcomes for Session 5

- Participants willing to stretch beyond their silos in order to solve institutional problems.
- Participants will be advancing in creative and strategic thinking.
- Every participant will be able to look at the Bank as One big culture beyond silos.

5.2 Developed Transformation Indicators (DTIs)

1. An evident good working relationship between different silos.
2. Communal approach towards problem solving and decision making.
3. Wide thinking approach cultivated in participants.

5.3 The TBG Activity

Instructions:

1. Team members will all drop their shoes at a central point and make a line.
2. Each team member will go to get one shoe until each one gets a full pair.
3. Whoever manages to wear both shoes will collect a balloon, pop it, and burst it on a chair where he or she will sit according to their groups.
4. The seats will be arranged in two cycles, representing the two groups.

Item	Description
a. Name of the Bank
b. Mandate
c. Core Values
d. Silos and their specific duties
e. The difference the Bank is making
f. The challenges the Bank is facing
g. The solutions for the experienced challenges

5. Upon completing your cycle, your team will be required to formulate and institute a Bank:
 - Give it a name
 - Frame its regulatory mandate and core values
 - Set up silos and assign them duties
6. You will choose a person who will present your group write-up in the following format:

Reflection Question 5.1

What did you learn about yourself and your team through this activity?

5.4 Challenges

1. Status vs. Stretch

Status refers to an impression that is tied to one's position or silo. A stretch is an adjustment that a team member makes to have a goal achieved. Sometimes this may contradict with his silo position and comfort.

Extraordinary results are impossible if people are not willing to go the extra mile beyond their silo.

2. Silo or Vision?

The One Bank Culture is institutional, not silo-based. An institution runs on vision beyond a silo confinement. While silos are where people feel a sense of belonging, the One Bank Culture goes beyond a silo.

Reflection Question 5.2

Where do you need to stretch beyond your silo for the sake of the vision?

5.5 Recommendations

1. Status vs. Stretch

- Team members must be entrusted with tasks that will demand wide thinking in order to achieve our extraordinary goals.
- Assigned tasks must carry a demand for a stretch. This is good for the growth of both individuals and the organisation.

2. Silo or Vision?

The Bank must continue to strategically assign members in collective form beyond silos.

Reflection Question 5.3

What collective task could your team undertake that would require members to stretch beyond their silos?

Session 5: Key Takeaways

- Status can hinder the stretch needed for extraordinary results.
- Vision must always transcend silo boundaries.
- Extraordinary results require extra-mile effort.
- Collective assignment beyond silos strengthens the One Bank Culture.
- Creative and strategic thinking are essential for problem solving and decision making.
